COSMEP 14th ANNUAL PUBLISHERS CONFERENCE

The Committee of Small Magazine Editors and Publishers (COSMEP) is a unique non-profit trade association bringing together over 1,000 book and periodical publishers based right here in San Francisco. Founded in 1968, and with an international reputation of bringing small presses of excellence together, it has never held its Annual Conference here—until this Fourth of July weekend.

San Francisco Arts and Letters, a literary resident group at Fort Mason Center, will host the conference in Buildings D & E starting with registration on July 2, 6-8 pm, continuing throughout the conference and ending with a public open meeting on July 6th. Activities for members and non-members ($50 fee non-members for whole conference) begin on July 3rd with Marketing I & II panels dealing with selling books & magazines to libraries, library media, jobbers, direct mailing, author promotion, legal problems, non-profit incorporation, etc. Poetry readings are open to the public and free, 8-10:30 pm.

On July 4th panels on bookstores, distributors, chains, media, exhibiting at bookfairs, NEA and arts councils is discussed. And from 8-10 pm, open and free to the public, San Francisco Arts and Letters will present special video-tapes from LAWSON & ARTS of outstanding writers, poets and arts personalities (which include interpreters for the deaf).

On July 5th most activities will be centered around membership matters, "Production & Equipment," printers, typesetting and book design.

On July 6th, an open board meeting will discuss issues relating to all matters of small press publishing and COSMEP. It is open to the public.

The annual COSMEP Conference immediately follows the American Library Association's convention in San Francisco and will take place during the 5th World Congress of Poets, bringing in added "crossover" literary and publishing personalities and experts, who will be attending the COSMEP affair. San Francisco Arts and Letters Director, Todd S. J. Lawson, himself a poet, T.V. host, writer, and former small press publisher, said, "We've done this San Francisco style and opened much of it to the public." Dr. Richard Morris, a founder and best-selling author (The End of the World) of COSMEP, along with an array of North Beach writers, will spice up the conference. Lawson, who is an Artists-in-the-Communities (AIC) recipient of the California Arts Council, noted that "Anyone involved in the small press movement will naturally cling to this special conference because it's a combination of the local crazies and the establishment—I'd pay $50 just to see who's who!"

Whether a COSMEP member or not, you can see both by registering for the events/seminars (July 2-6, call 921-6190 or 771-6711) or showing up for the freebies. COSMEP's writing address is P.O. 703, S.F., 94102, in case you miss all the action. Many of the 14th Annual COSMEP Publishers Conference events will be videotaped by S.F. Arts and Letters.

FRIENDS BENEFITS

Our "Friends" are very important to us. Their continued interest and financial support gives FMC a stable financial base from which to improve the operation and facilities at the Center. In turn, we arrange, with the cooperation of Resident and User groups, special monthly "Friends" discounts for events taking place at FMC. Join us now in this cooperative effort to develop our unique urban national park.

The July "Friends Benefits" are as varied as the July weather. S.F. Theatre Academy is offering a discount of 50¢ off the ticket price of $3.50 to "An Evening of One Acts." Performances are scheduled for July 3,4,10,11,17,18,24, and 25. (See Calendar listing for more information.)

The Pickle Family Circus is giving 50¢ off on tickets for their circus performances on July 4 and 5.

The YMCA Ballroom Dance classes and Dance Exercise classes will be available for "Friends" during the month of July at the same discount price offered to YMCA members. (See Classes and Workshops listing in the Calendar for more information.)

CONQUERING THE MIDSUMMER BLUES WITH GREAT CHILDREN'S ACTIVITIES

by Madeleine DeAndreis

The midsummer blues. Every kid gets them sometimes and when they do so do parents. For some parents summer is an anathema. For some children summer is an enigma. What to do and where to go when those midsummer blues hit? Fort Mason Center in San Francisco has a myriad of exciting suggestions to help combat those long days with "nothing to do."

AMATA—The Academy of Media and Theatre Arts—offers a series of ongoing classes and short-term workshops to children and young people in acting and production for the stage, video and radio. Applications for the second summer session are still being accepted and classes begin on July 20th and continue through until August 21st. For more information about summer classes or about the Academy's program call Candace Barrett or Lura Dolas at 776-4720.

"Tell It Like It Feels." This creative writing workshop is an opportunity for young peoples ages 17 and under to explore their creativity through the medium of poetry. Selections will be published in a collection entitled, "Tell It Like It Feels." For more information call the Young Peoples Poetry Workshop at 921-4470.

For the young aspiring filmmaker there is the Children's Animation Workshop. The young filmmaker aged 8 to 16 will learn to create animated films using original graphics, clay, stories and poetry. Sound effects and film editing will also be taught. Information can be obtained by calling 921-4470.

The San Francisco Children's Art Center offers classes for the very young artist. Instruction in painting, drawing, sculpture, and print-making is given and a changing exhibit of student artwork is always on display. For further information about summer classes for the child aged 2 to 10, call 771-0292.

Get away from amusement halls and into a more traditional form of mental exercise with the ever-popular game of chess. Children from 8 to 12 years old will learn basic chess moves, strategy, and chess history. Gifted students under 8 will be admitted. Call 474-5188.

If you are a fourth, fifth, or sixth grader who loves the out-of-doors and wishes to explore marine life in our own Bay Area, then the Bay Chapter of the Oceanic Society has a program for you. Sea Camp '81 offers two more summer sessions beginning July 6th and July 27th. Students will visit the Maritime Museum, the Steinhart Aquarium and the Marine Mammal Center and learn about our own unique coastline's botany and geology. For more information call 441-5970.
